Cindy Sherman, Kara Walker and Chloe Wise didn't become art world superstars overnight. In fact, the majority of celebrated artists struggled for years before they found fame – and most importantly – fortune. The art world is hard, both for artists and their patrons. How many of us can afford that masterpiece we've been hunkering after for years? Hmmm, not many. But there is a way we can support the next generation while also starting our own collections: by buying art from graduates. Hey, that Goldsmiths Graduate could be the next Picasso, you never know! Here's a list of some of the recent art girl graduates we're looking out for.

Nour El Saleh @nour.el.saleh

A recent graduate of London's Slade School of Fine Art, Nour El Saleh's recent paintings include characters that weirdly resemble herself and her family members. They have brown hair, brown eyes, dimpled chins and prominent noses, which she over emphasizes and uses as an empowering tool, given the complex around 'a perfect nose' and the prevalence of plastic surgery in the Middle East. The work will soon be on display at London's VO Curations.
